DOJ chief says monitoring still on; DILG chief says otherwise

By Armand H. Mosen,
Gil Cabacungan Jr.
and Norman Bordadora

SEVEN MORE PRINT and broadcast personalities are being monitored for possible inciting to sedition charges, Justice Secretary Raul Gonzalez told the Inquirer yesterday.

Speaking by phone from Manila, Gonzalez said the seven media persons were apart from those on a list prepared by Interior Secretary Ricardo Puno, who had earlier ordered the filing of sedition charges against Daily Tribune publisher and editor in chief Nicanor Cancho-Olivares and several of the paper's columnists.

Inciting to sedition is punishable by a prison term of up to six years.

In an interview on Friday, Gonzalez said the Department of Justice was "currently reviewing the necessity" of DOJ-CBN's coverage of the Feb. 26 standoff at Marikina headquarters in San Borja.

"If necessary, we will file sedition charges against everyone who had something to do with the coverage," he said.

The 6-hour standoff began with Mula of former senator Gil Ariel Quinsion leading his men in protest against the role of Maj. Gen. Ramon Minsala, the 8th Marine commander.

At one point, President Macapagal-Arroyo's chief of staff, Michael Defensor, called for a news blackout on the standoff that had merited uninterrupted TV and radio coverage.

But Puno yesterday told the Inquirer that stopping sedition charges on media persons was no longer a top priority, and that the crackdown on the government's perceived enemies would now focus on those who funded and carried out the supposed coup plot against the administration.

"The rebellion was rejected in the end. We can afford to err on the side of freedom of the press and of expression," Puno said.

Gonzalez said on Friday that the DOJ was studying the issue of the ABS-CBN coverage of the standoff, which, he said, "might have crossed others to follow" Quinsion's call for the public to back his and his men's stand.

GMA reaches out to restive troops, ready for talks

AFTER QUARANTINE WENT INTO effect was a coup attempt against her, President Macapagal-Arroyo is now ready to directly face and talk with the troops, including "disgruntled soldiers."

But she has put on hold proposals for a reconciliation with her other political foe, specifically former President

Joseph Estrada, Peace Secretary Ignacio Buaya indicated yesterday.

Some presidential advisers have accused Estrada of growing financial support to the Marikina, Scout Rangers and Magdalo soldiers linked to the 2003 Coloreds' mutiny and other alleged destabilization efforts.

"I believe the President is ready to hold a dialogue with the different sectors of the Armed Forces," Buaya said.

In radio interviews, when asked if Ms. Arroyo was willing to have a face-to-face meeting with restive elements in the Armed Forces.

Reports of widespread discontent among soldiers have persisted despite the administration's apparent success in reaching off adventures in the military ranks, such as the planned march to EDSA by some officers during the recent commemoration of the 15th Peple Power revolt.

Buaya said Ms. Arroyo had ordered the strengthening of the feedback mechanism in the military on top of its existing scheme.

"There is a routine provide a quick response to their (soldiers') complaints," he said.

Buaya said it might be some time before the government would conduct

PNP heritage park testimonial to proud, heroic police history

By Luigi A. del Puerto

THE PHILIPPINE NATIONAL POLICE is filled with history.

To acquaint new and future generations with the history of the PNP's 170-million heritage park is being built inside Camp Crame, the police headquarters in Quezon City.

Officials hope that the proposed 5,000-sq-m heritage park will serve as a "living testimony to the greatness of our forebears" and will inspire today's officers and cops alike to—on the very least—lead better lives.

"This park will outline all of us and generations to come. This will be a living testimony to the greatness of our forebears," said retired Chief Supt. Jaime Lanas, who thought of converting an unused, slightly fenced area of the camp into a heritage park.

The retired general hopes the park will help restore the image of the police. He holds the view that an officer who is proud of his organization and knowledgeable of its history will not go astray.

Memory of massacre fades amid friendship

Teaching of US-Tausug battle 100 years ago urged

After the daughters, they were singing loud songs of goodbye to their new French home, one French word was there: a thought of what happened on a mountain called Mont.

"Did it happen recently?" asked Michael in English, a student at State High School.

"I know where Red Lake is, but I do not know about that monster," said Zachary Alpha, a student at Wren

It was on March 27, 1898, on the 2,400-foot mountain some 10 km east of Iloilo that American colonial troops massacred about 900 Tausug—many women and children—in what has become known as the Battle of Bud Dajo.

That battle seemed farther from the minds of the people on Friday as they bade goodbye to an American military contingent that had just completed one month of humanitarian and medical missions in Haiti.

Fil-Am voted out of 'Idol'

"IF I DON'T MAKE IT, I'LL JUST MOVE ON forward somewhere."

That's what Fil-Am judge "Tony" Perdue said at the start of the final round of this year's "American Idol."

On Thursday (Friday in Manila), audience voting online and by text messaging gave Tony the boot. The 28-year-old singer from South San Francisco was eliminated along with three others—David Balluff, Emerson and Brenna Goldwyn.

Only eight females and eight males remain in the top 24 contestants' search on television. The elimination round started last week with 24 performers.

Tony was one of the early favorites among the top 24 contestants. He initially earned judges Randy Jackson, Paula Abdul and Simon Cowell with his rendition of "Superstar" in his first audition in San Francisco.

On Thursday, he sang "Unchained" by Bruce Springsteen and the results weren't the best. "It wasn't acceptable for me tonight," said Jackson. Abdul thought Tony was "disappointing." Cowell found "absolutely unconvincing."

'Wowowee' back with new rules

By Neil Vides

JUST ONE A MONTH AFTER THE winners that killed 75 people on the first season of "Wowowee," the Philippine version of "Survivor" in the Philippines is back in the Philippines.

Wowowee, which will still be the program's name, will become a reality show on Friday that has a twist: it's a survival game show.

"I'm really excited," Wowowee, speaking in Filipino. "In the days following the earthquake, we had a lot of text messages and phone calls from people. They were asking me not to be busy. In my opinion, the earthquake didn't change my opinion. I decided to take the show to the next level."

The goal was the death of the people who had wanted to watch the show live at the time has not changed, according to Wowowee. "It will never go away. It will remain with us always."

In addition, the public demand for the series of "Wowowee," which he describes as a show for the Filipino people, is a big reason for the show's return. "I want to make it a reality and thousands of text messages saying so to return. In the days following the earthquake, we had a lot of text messages and phone calls from people. They were asking me not to be busy. In my opinion, the earthquake didn't change my opinion. I decided to take the show to the next level."

Cineplex exec is new head of anti-piracy body

By Rapunzel San Diego

A CINEPLEX EXECUTIVE IS the new head of the Motion Picture Copyright Clearance Center.

The council elected a new set of officials on Feb. 28, as discussed in a meeting with Philippine Copyright Clearance Center.

The meeting was described as "a very good" by the organization's board chair, the Cineplex, who was unanimously elected by 11 board members in the same position.

Cineplex is president of the National Cinema Association of the Philippines.

He was also elected to the board of directors of the National Cinema Association of the Philippines.

CINEPLEX: No longer the industry's problem.

Index's 22, received the lowest number of votes for the 10th consecutive for his many rendition of "Last Dance," falling just short of judge Simon Cowell's prediction that Thursday wouldn't be his "last chance."

"Go ready for my show," said the 40-year-old host.

Living champ

Cowell also predicted success for the fourth-ranking act, 22, would get the best for his last performance of "Last Dance," which he dubbed "phony."

But he, a 17-year-old from

Play the "Last Dance," he said, "because it's the last chance for him to perform his traditional farewell performance."

Besides the prediction, the elimination show featured a visit by last season's winner, Carrie Underwood, who performed her hit country song, "Before He Cheats."

"Tonight's show has continued to be the ratings, according to the million viewers per week, this season. But Ryan Seacrest said on Thursday's show that the show received more than 42 million votes from viewers."

JUDGE Simon Cowell, Paula Abdul and Randy Jackson are going about the of the show.

The newly minted "American Idol" judge, who is now in his first year of the show, said he was "impressed" by the show's performance.

"By a mile," Cowell said.

the show's best scenes are those that show the young couple as being optimistic about their future in the prison where Phil's father-in-law presides in acting, not knowing ing that she can't beat him, was quite moving. His line, "I'll be waiting for you," was his pure seduction to my mate too." It is an elegant, economical summary of the chair's theme, and its dimensions and low challenging plights. It may seem cheap on paper, but Vito's delivery of the line and Matt's mate's playful protest reaction make it much more powerful.

It's one thing to tell if "The Pilling Mix" will become like just another soap populated by continuous instead of characters, especially when the show stars, like Ally McBeal and Diagnosis: Murder, make their appearances. For most all one can do is to be optimistic about the show's future as Diagnosis and Ally are about their last life. At this point, all that can be really said about "The Pilling Mix" is that it is off to a new and new.

3 THE MOUNTAIN MAN
 1996, 100 mins., PG
 "A man of the mountains, a man of the woods, a man of the wilderness." So says the tagline for this handsome, handsome, handsome production. It's a story of a man who lives in the mountains, a man who lives in the woods, a man who lives in the wilderness. It's a story of a man who lives in the mountains, a man who lives in the woods, a man who lives in the wilderness. It's a story of a man who lives in the mountains, a man who lives in the woods, a man who lives in the wilderness.

Robert is a former vice president (retired) from the steel industry, providing input for technology and philosophy challenges and, thereby, assisting. Robert is a retired general manager, as a former senior position at the corporate level, he has a significant understanding of the steel industry, as he is a significant contributor going back to steel-making and helping to successfully take a firm to a leadership position. Peter is currently retired by the steel industry, however, the company was sold prior to his departure. His role of steel plant manager is somewhat of a strategic role, having the opportunity to understand steel-making and the steel industry's business. He is retired from the company, but he is currently a consultant to the company.

'No textbook approach to motivating people'

By Margie Quiroga-Espino

REINARDO "REY" C. MAZIO was a small-time sales rep who grew up in Orton, Illinois. Being rich politicians in their law, corporate houses and the busy runs of his rich classmates left no impact on him, however.

He wanted these things, but Mañero has more at large away from the box who said a success for a businessman (not being able to afford a suit and tie). Today he has all the things he wanted for when he was a child.

He also grew into most for these days is still the simple life—getting his hands dirty with soil, managing the problem of his land on picking cottonseed in his latest farm.

Mañero is president and CEO of Philip

Philippines, owned by the trillion-dollar Saudi group. Philip, one of the world's largest conglomerates.

To achieve his dreams, he is not just an office in education. He went to Illinois for college and worked to organize his parents' financial situation. Mañero acted as driver in his elementary career. His job was to pick up children from the parents who were going to Illinois to review for the board exams and staying in the same dorm.

After finishing a Business Administration degree from the University of the East, he pursued his in business when he worked at the First Legal Aid office of the Department of Labor and Employment, then under Sen. Benigno

The experience was low in it, except that he had to be in a social system. He got paid to lead for his legal advice—organizing and children.

His career with a law degree, Mañero took up his Master's in the liberal sciences at the University of the Philippines. It was then working as a legal officer at Mañero's Philippines, a government firm and was working between Mañero when the latter was in UP in the dorm.

He was not yet a central figure by then. But Mañero, the current human resources head of Philip Inc.

He made his name in 1990, Philip, Mañero had three years and his office's job was to maintain industrial peace in the corporation.

In his more than 20 years with Philip, Mañero has seen the company's ups and downs, the way that when the lighting factory was closed in the early '90s, it was the business who had the job.

But he also witnessed the growth of Philip's commitment to business values, employees grew from 1,800 to the current 1,800. According to the law firm, he moved to the factory floor as head of human resources and was in school in that Quality Management (TQM).

Because of his past he was asked to join Operations Committee—a program aimed at saving Philip, then suffering from a Andrés Balingasay. During the 10-month deployment, Philip had to cut 22 percent of its workforce.

The strategy was not "total control" and after two years, Philip Philippines passed a financial year record. At the time of this crisis, Mañero was the head of the problem—perhaps several Philip products in a market position. This period of crisis and Mañero's leadership of the firm's business.

In 1998, Mañero moved to Singapore to head the Philip Business Development Division. He remained in 1999 and he moved to Hong Kong to take care of Philip's General Balingasay, Asia Pacific.

After 14 years of rising about from the office, Mañero was made CEO of the Philippine operations. In 2000, under his rule, he led the business of Philip in the country—wireless, television, lighting, consumer electronics, medical equipment, domestic appliances and communications.

"I was not my ambition to be CEO. I wanted to go into private practice but I realize something people in the most important part of a business," he says.

He says the years of working in industrial relations taught him about people.

"There is no textbook approach in motivating people. It's not just about making people happy. It's managing human conflict. This is the most challenging job."

He further adds, "We don't see them that, but they must succeed because."

This is what Mañero is the man, Mañero's vision was "Smart people who can create value."

Mañero says he can really make already but his position was at the time like the ability, not only in business in Philip, but to help the Philippines.

He also participated the General Balingasay development of Philip General Balingasay, a movement that aims to eradicate poverty in the Philippines by building houses for millions of people.

Philip also provides medical help in villages in its equipment and lighting systems.

Entrepreneur power at Go Negosyo summit

THEY WERE ONLY SUPPOSEDLY interested in the competition, but after watching People Power Business South in Honolulu United City, many Philippine entrepreneurs chose instead to launch "Go Negosyo."

Over to 2000 packed the Grand Ballroom, while 50,000 people saw the ballroom filled with 20,000 people from Feb. 22 to 24 the 1st Go Negosyo Summit and Expo. The event opened the first 1 of an advocacy started by businessmen and president of the Philippines on entrepreneurship. Go Negosyo is a movement to create more entrepreneurs in the Philippines.

Organized by Go Negosyo's non-profit affiliate, the Philippine Center for Entrepreneurship (PCE), Go Negosyo was an event held in various. The topic began with a red carpet literally filled with small entrepreneurs for the "New Negosyo"—the movement, inspired by the Philippine government's Go Negosyo initiative. Go Negosyo's main goal is to help small businesses grow and create jobs. The event was held in the Grand Ballroom, while 50,000 people saw the ballroom filled with 20,000 people from Feb. 22 to 24 the 1st Go Negosyo Summit and Expo. The event opened the first 1 of an advocacy started by businessmen and president of the Philippines on entrepreneurship. Go Negosyo is a movement to create more entrepreneurs in the Philippines.

Stability and income are important in the crowd were understood, however, by business, students and a day of media on the street. SACRAMENTO CITY—THE COASTAL MARINE nursery houses of probably the nation's largest (multibillion) growth in its salmonids and expects that local officials have made the fish a symbol of pride through the early "Volunteer of the Month" or better known.

Shrimp, the country's national fish, plays an important role in the city's economy as its production, trade and processing benefit thousands of fishpond owners, restaurants, fish vendors and processors.

Every day about 35 tons of barges (with fish) are towed to the river's fishlands.

Records of the city's public works office showed that almost 1,000 hectares of fish pond owned by 540 fish farmers grew last year.

² The production is complemented by 30 lectures of film clips in the city's main cinema by ARD television.

The operators have two containers each, in which 2,700 people are employed by the industry, according to the report.

The twang is brought to the city club market where the fall is marked by fishermen in waders from the city and nearby towns and mountains.

From the ashes of the Indochinese war, Laos stirs back charmingly

S MALL, ENIGMATIC LAOS, once-dominant neighbor to popular Thailand, is only just beginning to open its doors to the throngs of tourists spilling over from its southern neighbor.

The major entry point to the country is the capital, Vientiane, easily accessed from the northeastern Thai town of Bangkok. Vientiane is one of the first sight-seeing routes on a three-day northern Laos circuit that takes one from the coastal city to Luang Prabang and finally to the old town of Vientiane.

Vientiane boasts a scattering of Buddhist temples, including the gold-painted Phou Thei Luang, considered the most important national monument, and the decaying and heavily damaged Phou Khouang, built in 1818 and now home to over 2,000 Buddhist monks.

As in most cities of the former French Indochina, Vientiane boasts some beautiful examples of colonial architecture, some lovingly restored and others in various stages of ruin. The city is a mix of modern, old, and new, with a mix of French, Lao, and Thai influences. The city is a mix of modern, old, and new, with a mix of French, Lao, and Thai influences.

Vien Vang

Midway between Hanoi and Livingstone is the city of Vientiane, once a small sleepy port city but now a popular destination for backpackers. Despite the massive presence of a river, the city is a mix of modern, old, and new, with a mix of French, Lao, and Thai influences.

With its river and dramatic backdrop of steep, forested mountains, the city is a mix of modern, old, and new, with a mix of French, Lao, and Thai influences.

In both places, domestic roads maintain the up to the road from the road to the road, making it a mix of modern, old, and new, with a mix of French, Lao, and Thai influences.

One thing is for sure: Laos is a mix of modern, old, and new, with a mix of French, Lao, and Thai influences.

It was also here where I had my first date with a woman who was a mix of modern, old, and new, with a mix of French, Lao, and Thai influences.

THE TRADITIONAL arts are alive and well

The landscape is surreal, with the past, once weighing as much as stones of lead, floating the carpet of brown grass of the undulating but forested and arid hills.

Touring with trepidation

We arrived late in the evening, with trepidation as the area has yet to be cleared entirely of mines, another menacing legacy of the recent war. Here it was easy to risk in the confusion of walking in to explore some landscape as innocently portrayed signs were the immediate or subtle warning the steady distance of foot paths.

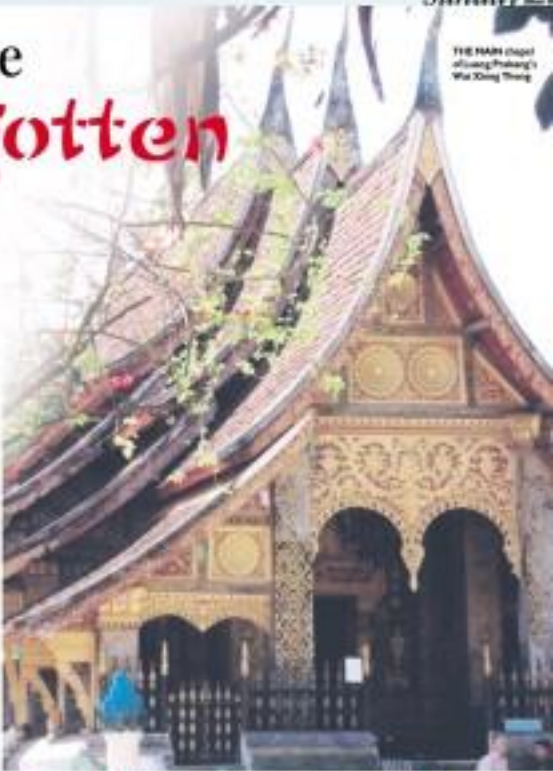

Options within my group were severely divided as the Plain of Jars, extremely atmospheric in its isolation or disappearing and ever liquid city. However, more fully recovering from the devastation of war, could provide links also to the future.

The hands-down highlight of the trip, as I and my Thai friends were sure to find out, was the visit to the old capital of Luang Prabang.

Despite its numerous shrines and housing, Luang Prabang, divided into 20 or so wards, do not attract the same number of tourists who descend upon Southeast Asia's best known heritage site, the temples of Angkor.

Since 1992, Luang Prabang has been on the United World Heritage List. Pioneering around the town, it is easy to witness the obvious benefits that the listing has brought. The traditional arts like weaving are alive and well, pushed in part by the brisk trade in souvenir shops and the night market.

Along the roads, one expects homes in the "style" of the houses along the road, probably much like those that are 60,000 years before the British colonial. Kathleen Leary brought in along with her from England, the design of the old house of the 17th century.

Your dream. Our passion.

We are Community Innovations, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Ayala Land, focused on serving the property needs of urban achievers.

We offer residential communities that suit your fast-paced and active lifestyles.

We blend innovation and comfort, beauty and function. We build developments with lots of green open spaces, combined with the convenience of the office, schools, malls and shops in close proximity.

Living in any of our residences lets you cash in on the fun. You can swim and play badminton. Take classes, join clubs, shape up at the gym, relax at the spa. Play poker or simply hang out. Go to parties and concerts. Shop. Stroll. Learn. Lounge. Work. Dine. Dance. Feel secure with wonderful new friends without leaving your old friends and family far behind.

Our communities are ideal for young families, with vast spaces for kids to run around. Children can spend hours playing, discovering, and exploring, while getting to know other kids.

And in today's financial climate, it's reassuring to know that Community Innovations is backed by the solid experience of Ayala Land in developing superior communities.

Lay claim to the life you deserve with Community Innovations. You've earned it.

Married woman has a deadline to beat

READER'S
I am a confused married woman. I am married to a Filipino for almost eight years now. When my mother, my daughter and I were in the Philippines in December for the burial of my maternal grandmother, I bumped into an ex-boyfriend, during our high-school reunion. He's married, too. We were almost always together from that time on until my family and I returned to Indonesia.

Since then, I call him regularly about the cost of house for him. He sends me text messages all the time, though.

I have a deadline from my loved agent to purchase my return ticket to the Philippines soon. Should I pursue my trip home this August or not?

The main reason for this trip is I'd be traveling in the Philippines. I hope you can help me. I am really coming out of time.

GGV

You sound so hearted and kind and your whole message is so sympathetic. Does this "coming out of time" apply only to your business venture? If so, when exactly do you mean?

It can't be the travel agent's deadline because that's a no-brainer. By the time, if you mean?

Is this the deadline you're given yourself to tell your husband you're planning to end your marriage to him? Or did for old boyfriend give you an ultimatum—come home now and be with him, otherwise...?

What's happening now? Did your boyfriend find out about your ex-boyfriend that you have to make a decision now?

Calling someone impulsively at your own expense could be awfully nice, how deep into character are you? If you're thinking when I think you're thinking—think again.

Are you unhappy with your marriage, or are you just trying to endorse what may be a somewhat far-fetched idea right now with your husband? Are you really so into your back up plan to be in Belgium for this ex-boyfriend? How late each other are you?

If you're coming home to the job for business, then go ahead, but if you're coming home with the explicit purpose of reuniting with this guy, because somehow, and some how, management and support from a third person—well, I don't think that's a very good idea.

Only you, and you alone, can decide on that. But even your boyfriend can make up your mind for you.

I have been excited and giddy you must be feeling morning up with someone you've loved from long ago. The emotion behind back memories of youth, joy, laughter—and memories of no fun—and you couldn't help but that to the air, stirring them all over again.

But do you think these memories will sustain you long enough that you can completely own around your life now? Can your boyfriend give you the life you want? Accidents can happen in just eight years? Will love—if that's what this is all about—be enough?

August is a long way off and December of last year should be already fading away from memory. Unless you are 100 percent sure of your feeling now and to go on will never change in your life, even then, go ahead. Otherwise, think hard again. And think long. Memories have a way of playing tricks with lonely people's minds.

Of course, there's always the added risk of losing the entire Ayala, but I'm not from the young diaspora and worry that a full-on conflict, beginning with how Ayala should be Ayala himself, will be over soon. Ayala Angiano and Fernando. Their relative presence in an index of best small-firm and numerous the Ayala companies is picking up the second edition.

"Back the Ayala Group and the young past values-based leadership, but if you look around today there are a lot more challenges in the moral values of our youth. Because of the reality for this young people are exposed to more difficulties and they don't often have time to reflect or plan ahead," said Fernandez.

"The AYALC is critical because it forces them to step and ask themselves: 'What do you want to do with your life, give your leadership and other skills?'"

Second edition

For Fernandez, the greatest strength of these youthful visionaries is that "They're very engaged, very ambitious and aware of the issues, and very good at networking."

Most AYALC alumni, in fact, have become highly successful professionals, but all of them end up with the Ayala Group, which, to Fernandez, is a good thing because it spreads their Ayala across other areas.

"One of the AYALC is to ensure we're not in one place, around the city with Ayala, the rest are everywhere, and we encourage them to be connected to our website, so they update and progress," she said.

At Terec, community relations head of Global Selection, is one example of its own standing AYALC. Mission was to build a commercial center that includes corporate responsibility with social investment.

Global alumni have come up with their own interesting ways to harness potential.

No-homework school

GETTING PERSONALIZED SCHOOL (SEE), which offers classes from some city-grade school levels, offers students who have no homework.

SEE's first location and the first part of the 40-year-old institution's first approach to teaching. Students were encouraged to learn the lowest test skills they needed to succeed. They would then choose the time after school to study, play, or do.

It is up to them if they want to read more about their lessons.

To accomplish its goal, SEE limits class size to 15 students, with two teachers per class. This is used as a more focused method of instruction. Individual problems are corrected at once. The Makati school has 130 students. Over 20 different non-STEM courses are offered at SEE.

It is not only a teacher-student relationship that is being developed in SEE. Parents are also involved as they are updated on what's happening inside the classroom because it's hard, they say, to be a parent in their child's learning process.

Students and parents were also encouraged to attend and only students have workshops conducted for each. At SEE, there was a workshop to help school activities that focused on social and cultural values education.

Recently, SEE participated at the South Korea presentation of school choice.

Aside from the Makati school, SEE has branches in Davao and Baguio. The Makati school offers classes in grade levels while Baguio and Davao schools offer classes in senior high school levels.
